Mr. Kramer,

You seem to be someone that has had a lot of conflicts in your life and I know there are a lot of stressful occurrences right now going on across the world. I feel you may have had an emotional disturbance when you were younger that truly did influence the way you think and how you perceive situations, combined with the true insanity that is going on in the world right now, I feel you are being adversely effected and adding to the insanity with your judgments. I would suggest utilizing cognitive thinking to help you with your course in life. If nothing else, this has been highly amusing reading Michael's satires.

Sincerely,
Bren Winkler

Jim,

Thanks for so clearly and reasonably explaining those points. That Meier has long since tired of the amateur "debunkers" and their fearful and malicious efforts to prevent their paradigms from imploding is painfully obvious. Likewise, that they continue to attempt to slander persons associated with the case brands them forever as banal guttersnipes for whom truth is a nasty inconvenience.

As usual, no response, let alone rebuttal, to the clear, factual expository and conclusion that Mr. James Randi is a scurrilous liar and fraud.

Dave, let me add my two cents here, also.

That science writer who wrote the article in:
<http://www.ufo.net/ufodocs/text.documents/u/ufo-art1.txt>
wasn't allowing any alternative explanations to be heard. Wendelle Stevens appears to have been under strict orders to not speak out on just what happened that day, and it was, or would have been, simple for underground military/governmental agents who were involved in keeping important UFO events covered up or marginalized to drum up false charges to which Stevens would have to plea-bargain in order to avoid a life sentence. All that most of us know is that he had apparently allowed some neighbor girls to skinny dip in the swimming pool in his back yard. He is not known to have been involved in any sexual offenses before then, or since then. Only if a science writer is ignorant about the reality of the UFO phenomenon and of how seriously those in the government who are "in the know" feel about it, would he not know their need to get some sort of hold over Stevens by which they could falsely discredit him. This side of the story was entirely left out.

And Davidson used pejorative language such as unjustifiably calling Meier's reports "tales"; he falsely stated that Meier had said that the UFOs he had photographed resembled hub-caps, while it was some others who said that, who seemed never to wonder why the "hubcap" was nearly as wide as the width of the abies-alba fir tree about which it had hovered and posed on all sides, which fact Davidson, if he knew about it, stayed silent on; he said that the tape-recorded (beamship) sounds by Meier (in the presence of many witnesses to it and to its extremely great intensity) resembled sound effects from old science-fiction films, which is patently untrue; and so on. It just doesn't do science any justice to trot out a totally biased account like that of Davidson's.

Regarding what Billy Meier was told about tachyons, or what he was told about who-all have been contacted by ETs and who have not, don't forget that there Billy is just repeating what he learned from his ETs. Some of what he learned may have been misinformation, designed to be passed on to skeptics who need some items to latch onto with which they can debunk Billy, and which may let them get by with ignoring the evidence indicating that his contacts did occur, and that his photographic data and other data are very real.

So why confuse the events of Meier's contacts for which he collected evidence of their presence with statements coming from his contactors? This is another alternative that apparently did not occur to Keay Davidson -- that the key aliens involved in the UFO phenomenon are more ethical than to want to rush our science and society into any sudden realization of their presence and reality. It is simple then for these ETs to outwit and dupe those scientists who know no better than to assume that everything an ET tells his contactee must be the truth or else it must represent lies invented by the alleged contactee.

Concerning why Michael hasn't arranged for "some real testing of the alleged alien material(s)," I rather doubt that he would get Meier's permission for this.

That's because Meier did give quite a lot of material to Stevens for this purpose, back around 1979-81, and if the test results from those years weren't believed, he may feel, why would further tests be believed either?

Meier never received most of this material back, as it tended to get "lost" one way or another. Some 25 years have since gone by, and Meier has, I believe, long since stopped caring about any need to prove that his contacts were and are real.

But then, if some way could be arranged for ensuring that a lab which would do a comprehensive test would not be surreptitiously informed as to what it was all about, and would honestly report its findings and not stay silent, then who knows -- Meier might surprise me. But who could guarantee that the lab(s) involved would not be informed on the side by one who wished to warn them that their reputations could be in very serious jeopardy if they were to write out the truth of their findings? Just like Marcel's reputation was probably besmirched by those who did not like what he had to say about the alloy sample of Meier's that he analyzed.

Well, Mike, I'm sorry if I touched a nerve by including the mention of Wendelle Stevens from the THE SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINER article of June 24th, 1987. I didn't need to include that, but the article as a whole is quite relevant to the whole Billy Meier story, which was why I mentioned it earlier. It's online in its entirety here:

<http://www.ufo.net/ufodocs/text.documents/u/ufo-art1.txt>

If you have a problem with what that article said about Stevens, perhaps you should take it up with the author, Keay Davidson, now at the San Francisco Chronicle, "Keay Davidson" <kdavidson@sfchronicle.com>.

As regards Meier's mention of tachyons, it's still a pretty dubious "proof." There's never been experimental confirmation of tachyons, and their very existence would call Einstein's relativity theory into question.

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tachyon>

"The property of causality, a fundamental principle of theoretical particle physics, poses a problem for the physical existence of tachyons. If a tachyon were to exist and were allowed to interact with ordinary (time-like) matter, causality could be violated ... At the very least the principle of special relativity would have to be discarded."

That's Meier's reported time happens to agree with a wild speculation from a physicist is not really very compelling, either. This is piling dubious on top of uncertainty.

As for your attacks on my credentials, perhaps you'd be interested to know that, unlike you, I've actually been involved in the formal scientific testing of a purported UFO artifact. That was the Roswell "Fragment" of 1996, in which a man who moved to Roswell from Utah gave a piece of material to the UFO museum, telling them he'd been told it was from the Roswell crashed craft. When the museum people started thinking about how to test the artifact, I suggested a specific material test which could indicate if the specimen was compatible with earthly/solar system material properties, and the museum went ahead and acted on my suggestion. They had some tests performed at Los Alamos National Labs for about $750.00. The specimen was earthly, as it turned out - and later, it was found to be a piece of scrap filched from a Utah artist's studio.

The point is, the museum did the right thing, had some real tests done, and learned about their specimen.

You could do that too, Mike, if your self-proclaimed status of "authorized American media representative for the Meier material" is genuine and actually GOOD for something. If you are so authorized, then why haven't you hustled the material to a lab as fast as you can? If it's Randi's outfit that you're afraid of, I can get you in contact with LANL scientists who have the equipment for such testing. There may be a fee, of course, but it's slow at LANL with the classified shutdown, so this might be an ideal time for such a project.

If you really want to get the attention of the world's scientists, why don't you try helping to arrange some real testing of the alleged alien material(s)???? If not at JREF or IIG, somewhere? (Sandia /Los Alamos?)Why do you try to change the subject with megabytes asnd megabytes of arrogant and condescending rants????

That, Mike, is the $1,000,000 question!

Sincerely, Dave Thomas
